Coke Studio Nu.WAV releases fifth track Qasam

OUR STAFF REPORTER
ISLAMABAD

Coke Studio Nu.WAV continues with its fifth release, Qasam, bringing together Shae Gill and Afusic on an experimental pop track produced by Abdullah Kasumbi. Qasam pairs contemporary electronic production with a distinctly South Asian sound of the sarangi. Written by Afusic, the song explores the uncertainty of a relationship caught between hurt, attachment and the desire to hold on. While the lyrics carry that emotional weight, Abdullah Kasumbi's production keeps the track energetic and moving, creating a beautiful contrast between what the song is saying and how it feels musically. That contrast also comes through in the vocals. Afusic brings his familiar rhythmic phrasing to the track, while Shae Gill explores a vocal range and style that audiences have heard less often from her, giving the two voices distinctly different textures. Gul Khan's sarangi runs through production, adding another emotional layer to its electronic sound. Kusumbi's direction focuses on movement, exploring the relationship that sits at the heart of Qasam. Rather than telling the story literally, the choreography follows different stages of connection: two people drawing closer, pulling apart, trying to trust one another and finding their way back again. At one-point, invisible strings appear to connect and control the dancers; elsewhere, their bodies move almost like stitches, repeatedly coming together and separating again. These ideas echo the song's central theme of a relationship that is trying to repair itself even as it threatens to come apart, and that is the magic of these Movement Director, Shams Mansur. The music video was shot inside Karachi's century-old Bristol Hotel, with Hammad Sohail's production design using the building's existing character as part of the visual world. Its ageing interiors, chandeliers and weathered surfaces are paired with details including fading flowers and a banquet left untouched, creating a setting that feels as though it has been lived in for a long time.
